The Board of Trustees of the University of Oregon met in the Ford Alumni Center on the UO campus on June 4 and 5, 2015. Below is a summary of Board reports, discussions, and actions.

THURSDAY, JUNE 4, 2015

The meeting was called to order at 8:36 a.m. by Board Chair Chuck Lillis. Roll call was taken and a quorum was verified. The Board approved minutes from the March and April 2015 meetings.

School of Architecture and Allied Arts. The Board received a presentation about the School of Architecture and Allied Arts (AAA) from Interim Dean Brook Muller. His presentation covered the history of the School and programs offered, how the allied approach continues to shape the way the School works and positively affects rankings, the importance of integration with other schools on campus to open up more possibilities for students, the structure of the faculty and the number of students enrolled in the School. Muller highlighted that AAA is ranked number one in the country in sustainable design, discussed the contributions AAA offers to the University in recruiting students. Muller spoke to the funding structure of the School, the constant change in technology that requires the School to stay current in their programs in order to maintain their number one status in sustainability, that AAA faculty spend more time in class than many other schools on campus, the faculty and student research and its application in the workforce, facilities being used by the School, the need for more studio space and deferred maintenance, and possible solutions to these issues. Chair Lillis inquired about the job market for graduates of AAA. He explained that the market was challenging in recent years, but the trend seems to be going up.

College of Arts and Sciences, Natural Sciences. The Board heard from Andrew Marcus, Interim Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences (CAS), and Hal Sadofsky, Associate Dean of Natural Sciences. Marcus provided an overview of CAS including perspective on the size and scope of the college, information about the faculty and research awards, and growth and space considerations. He also discussed the primary challenge facing the college at this time, which relates to the budget and the ability to maintain funding, especially while facing rising costs and expected retirement rates. Marcus also discussed the need to focus on student success and excellence.

Sadofsky dove further into the Natural Sciences, which make up about 25% of the UO’s undergraduate majors, Ph.D. students, and tenure-related faculty. Sadofsky provided an overview of each area of study within the Natural Sciences, discussed the nature of interdisciplinary themes within the programs, centers and institutes. He discussed how some of the Social Sciences intersect with Natural Sciences, particularly in the centers and institutes. Chair Lillis inquired about institutes and why they exist. Sadofsky discussed that the institutes support interdisciplinary research.

Sadofsky discussed trends in the educational mission and the research mission; provided trustees with information about student credit hours, enrollment growth from 2007-2014, undergraduate majors, undergraduate degrees, undergraduate degree growth, trends in student credit hours and majors in the Natural Sciences; an overview in trends for CAS majors from 2009-2014; and information about why so many Ph.D. students are in the natural sciences.

Sadofsky discussed student success, student involvement with research, national competitiveness, the need to have additional advisors, and the need to look closer at pedagogy since the gateway classes like biology and math are usually what prevent students from pursuing a Natural Science degree. Sadofsky provided research characteristics and a snapshot of the Natural Sciences, including a reference to the personnel and resources necessary for lab-intensive programs. Sadofsky discussed facilities, growing needs, research strengths, and faculty accomplishments.

Marcus closed the presentation by discussing the importance of the scale of the sciences and what takes place in CAS. He also emphasized that the Natural Sciences are a bragging point for the University. Marcus solicited input from the Board for any additional information they may want to know concerning CAS.
